The Circuit Court

The term of the Montgomery Circuit Court adjourned Saturday, and Judge Cooper began court at Owingsville yesterday. Among the Commonwealth cases depopulated:

William Woods (col.) got three years on a charge of robbery.

Tom Reed (col.) will spend one year in the pen for false swearing.

Jim Hall (col.) for murder was given a life sentence.

Dan Day (white) for house breaking received one year.

Floyd Greenwave (col.) got a year on a charge of grand larceny, but applied for and received a new trial.

Judge Cooper still has the application of English Anderson for bail under advisement.

Of the minor cases, the Sheriff will sell Marcus Bean and Ellen Diggers (both colored) for vagrancy. The Circuit Clerk has several negroes to bind out under judgment of the court who were tried for vagrancy.

The protracted meeting at the Baptist church closed last Sunday evening with 20 additions. The house was crowded to its utmost Sunday evening to hear the last sermon of Rev. J. H. Dew, of Louisville, and to witness the administration of the ordinance of baptism to 18 converts. The meeting was a grand one and was participated in and highly appreciated by the different denominations of the city. Rev. Dew is a strong and acceptable preacher of the gospel, and the prayers of our people follow him in his high calling, his noble work. May the Lord attend him in his labors for good.

Born, on Wednesday, to Ernest Henry and wife, a four-pound daughter.

SENATOR DAVID B. HILL

Nominated for Governor of New York.

On Wednesday the Democratic convention of New York State nominated Senator David B. Hill for Governor. Mr. Hill had called the convention to order and the names of several gentlemen had been placed before the convention, when Delegate Reynolds, of Alleghany county, arose and said: "The united delegation from Alleghany county desire to place in nomination for Governor their first and only choice, David B. Hill."

Then occurred one of the wildest scenes that could be imagined. Delegates jumped upon the chairs, spectators crowded into the aisle, hats were thrown heavenward, canes with ribbons waved wildly, and men yelled themselves hoarse in their cheer after cheer that almost rent the frail building in twain.

Senator Hill grew pale with emotion, but in an almost faint hope that he would be able to stem the tide, pounded vigorously with the gavel and cried for order. The Secretaries left their desks, and jumping noon chairs, also cheered with the multitude. Bourke Cockran, John F. Grady, Mayor Gilroy, Thomas F. Murphy, and other leaders jumped upon the press tables and urged on the applause. The only persons in the hall who were seated were those few members of the press who during the chaos were endeavoring to complete their stories.

It was in vain that Senator Hill protested and called for order; the convention had taken the bit in its teeth and was running things to suit itself. State Senator Guy and Congressman Bourke Cockran seconded the nomination. Senator Hill, the Chairman of the committee, was compelled to sit by and see himself nominated whether he would or no.

Hon. Daniel N. Lockwood was without opposition nominated for Lieutenant Governor, and Judge Wm. Gaynor for Appellate Judge.

The convention adopted a platform commanding the Tariff Bill and depreciating any further revision for the present, declaring the Income Tax an embarrassment to the party, and denouncing Trusts and the A. P. A. This done, Chairman Hill proceeded to adjourn the convention by saying: "The convention that is running it's self wants to adjourn, I declare it adjourned."

Senator Hill has not yet signified either an acceptance or a rejection of the nomination.

The Ladies' Lyceum Society at the Baptist church, was organized last Friday evening, and they have booked five of the most noted lecturers for the season. October 18, Temple Graves; November 12, Madison C. Peters; January 25, Rev. Robert C. Dixon; March 4, Hon. Lewis Irving Hanby, and in the month of April, Edward P. Elliott. On account of such an organization and the success of these gifted lecturers our people will rejoice, and greater will be the pleasure when they learn that a season ticket to all five lectures can be bought at $2, when the price to any one in the cities would be $1.50 or $7.50 for the five.

Murder

Is the wilful and malicious taking of human life. The crime, according to the Bible, should always be punished with death. But in our day, especially in our country, it brings with it only a good deal of notoriety, and not death. But we may rest assured of this, that God will one day visit on the people of this country a fearful retribution for the indulgence which they show to this crime. Take the life of him who wilfully and with malice takes the life of his fellowman; do this surely, do it in all cases, and murder will cease. Fail to do this and you breed mobs; for the world is turned loose by a corrupt court of law, to murder again at will.

That is a morbid and most pernicious sentiment which forgets what is due to God, to society and to the murderer, through sickly sentiment for the murderer. It is devoid of justice; nor is it any proper expression of mercy.

The frequency with which this crime is committed in this country is positively alarming. Moreover, if the person committing it stand high, and has plenty of money, there is, as every one knows, literally no punishment for him. He is merely annoyed with the form of a trial—that is all.

The shocking extent to which this crime prevails loudly calls for a remedy; and for murder there is but one remedy. Whenever every murderer stakes his head by the certain loss of his own life, murders will well nigh cease, not before. The pulpit and press should ring with efforts to create a public sentiment that will be satisfied with nothing short of the adequate punishment of the crime. "Whoso sheddeth man's blood, by man shall his blood be shed"—Gen. 9: 6. This is God's own decree against the murderer, a decree enacted for the whole human race, and which has never been repealed, revoked or set aside. The State or court, therefore, that is daring enough to presume to disregard it, is false alike to God and to society. No degenerate sentiment should be allowed to supplant the law. On the contrary, nothing but the sturdy execution of it is just to the murderer or to society.

Lieutenant Harry Stough, of the Lexington police force, yesterday returned Marcus Dean (colored), who had been convicted of vagrancy in our Circuit Court, and had skipped before he could be placed in the hands of the Jailer. His bondsman, under the mistaken idea that he was released from all responsibility, advised Marcus to "git" and later invested $10 to have him returned.

Robt. Barnes and James Bush, two of our most popular young men, leave next week for Liverpool, England. They will be gone about a month, unless they decide to make a tour of the continent. The young men have charge of some extensive cattle shipments which calls them to England, have concluded to combine business with pleasure.

Oldham & Co., of Richmond, have rented the store-room corner of Main and Broadway of Mrs. Hironymus, and will occupy it January 1st with a stock of dry goods, etc.

Bank Changes.

As has been heretofore anno, Judge Howard R. French some time since resigned the position of Cashier of the Mt. Sterling National Bank (to be succeeded by Mr. Pierce Winn), and accepted a like position with the Exchange Bank of Kentucky, of this city. His term of service in the Mt. Sterling National expired with the close of business Saturday afternoon, and began with the Exchange at the opening of business yesterday morning. For some seventeen years Judge French filled the post of Cashier at the Mt. Sterling National Bank to the entire satisfaction of directors and stockholders. His record is a clean one, and when the time arrived to sever his relations with the bank, he could leave with the very kindest feelings existing between himself and those with whom he had so long been associated. Judge French has in his long term of service made many dollars for the stockholders of the bank, and never for one hour did he cease to enjoy the full confidence and unbounded respect of everyone. All this he brings to his new love, the Exchange.

The gentleman who succeeds Judge French would under all ordinary circumstances have had his hands full, to render to the bank and its customers the same service that they have been wont to receive. But trying as the position would ordinarily be, Mr. Pierce Winn is fully equal to it. He has worked himself up step by step as Messenger, Clerk, Teller, Assistant Cashier, till when the Bank wanted a thoroughly reliable man to fill the Cashier's place, the Director did not have far to look.

Mr. John G. Winn, the President of the Mt. Sterling National, has himself won honor in the record of faithful service to the Exchange Bank. He took the place of Cashier of the Bank a few years ago, when the Bank's paper was worth less than 50 cents, he leaves it worth more than one.

John G. Winn, the President of the Mt. Sterling National, has himself won honor in the record of faithful service to the Exchange Bank. He took the place of Cashier of the Bank a few years ago, when the Bank's paper was worth less than 50 cents, he leaves it worth more than one.

THE BICYCLE GIRL.

The bicycle girl is plump and round. Her cheeks are rosy, her skin is browned. Her checks are bright with health. In short, she is a picture. She gets all the admiration she deserves.

To a woman is greater wealth. Her flesh is soft and her muscles strong. Her skin is tan and her hair golden. To a goddess of olden time. As she glides along on her silent wheel All eyes are fixed upon her. That her vigor is sublime.

Then shall to the bicycle girl, and long May she live and grow more strong. As a girl she tries Till her weaker sisters also try With her in her health and her strength And get them bicycles too.

A TRANSFORMATION.

"Put's" log tavern, near the ford of Little Snake creek, was the central point of a wild region thinly peopled by Indians and miners. There was no other regular stopping place between the mining camps far off under the snow capped Silver Bow range and the "city" of Dowling, 70 miles away across the Little Snake.

"Put's" consisted of a store, a bar, a bunkroom and a kitchen. It was the base of supplies for the scattered population and the scene of their some-times wild revels. There was no other regular stopping place between the mining camps far off under the snow capped Silver Bow range and the "city" of Dowling, 70 miles away across the Little Snake.

"Shorty" was one of the chief attractions at Put's. Dwindlingly he had been his host's favorite, but, contented in some measure, he and side shows had not agreed with him. The coldly curious eyes that stared at him all day had seemed to follow him through the darkness and into his dreams. So, grown restless, he had given up the proud title of "emperor of Lilliput," and taken his turn as a spectator in the wild scenes.

Glad to escape from crowded streets, he had traveled in wild places till his savings were spent and then turned up "broke" at Put's. When he had been there a week, Put, who loved what he called "phenomenons," had invited him to stay forever, and when a month had passed it was clear to the worthy host that Shorty was not a mere "phenomenon," but in every way a man after his own heart.

The men of the Little Snake region at first accorded him the compassionate respect that strength yields to weakness, then the honor due to a superior, and finally the love of life which such a lively zest gives it seemed as if the little frame that held his spirit had served to concentrate rather than restrain its powers.

Constant exercise made him tough and wiry as a bob cat. His steady hand and quick eye soon became those of a doll shot. He could approach and hit with either hand, and not even within range. He learned to ride boldly, and bronchos obeyed him easily, for he had that rich, gentle voice a horse loves, and he was utterly fearless.

Moreover, he was ingenious and handy with tools, while his social qualities, gay songs, power of mimicry, imitative dancing and sterling good nature made him friends everywhere.

All the bairns of Put's were agreed that, "Barrin looks, there warn't nothin' small about Shorty." One man, however, less through unkind intent than from coarse stupidly, persistently hurt the little man's feelings.

"Ain't you skinned her hev sech a big, savage lookin critter around?" he said to Put, with a roar of laughter, on first seeing Shorty.

"Look a here, kid," he went on addressing the dwarf, "my little gal up the creek's been 'lowin' I'd order get her a new plowshare. Would y'all like the satten?"

"To judge from the looks of your horse, friend," said Shorty, "there ain't no way to say over much to eat for a doll up the creek, and I guess I'll be obliged to refuse your kind offer on them grounds."

A few days later, however, says Shorty without mocking him for his lack of inclusiveness, till the time came when the little man won a singular victory over his persecutor.

Tuckerson, though one of the first settlers on the Little Snake, was not well known there. He sought no company, and his claims were too far off to be worth the while to come from mere curiosity. Yet there was some curiosity as to what he hoped to do with that claim. It had no pasture nor any minerals so far as the miners knew.

Here Tuckerson, a widower, lived with his only child, a girl about 12 years of age, his claims being too far off to be worth the while to come from mere curiosity.

At first, however, he never saw Shorty without mocking him for his lack of inclusiveness, till the time came when the little man won a singular victory over his persecutor.

Shorty learned to dread the sight of Tuckerson, whose imagination had evolved one especial joke which he often repeated.

"Waal, Shorty," he would say, "did make out ter beat that jack rabbit y'all was wrastin' of under the sage yesterday? I see he was givin ya a good time."

The words and tone relaxed, though Shorty never let it appear that he was hurt.

This joke was nearly three years when a change became visible in Tuckerson. His visits to Put's and Dowling city became more and more frequent, and when he came there was an excited air about him, something like the tension and sternness of a determined man. He drank more than had been his wont, and it was observed by Put, that he seldom brought hides and furs, but paid in gold dust.

"Them dust an nuggets may be theavin' of a long life of frugal industry," said Put one day, "but it do seem of us friend up the creek had struck a placer. What's your idea, Shorty?"

"It ain't no business of ours, Put. Let's not give Tuckerson away if he's workin' on a claim on the quiet."

Nevertheless the rumor got abroad, and some persons who did not hear it were Tuckerson himself and the lonely little girl in his remote, inhospitable cabin.

One day Tuckerson came galloping up, his face wild with excitement, his speech breathless and not very coherent, his manner full of a triumphant violence, as if he had just secured an advantage over the rest of mankind.

He ordered liquor, drunk far too much, took with him to cheer his lonely way to Dowling and left the bar laughing at Put's remonstrances.

"See that galoot!" the host remarked as Tuckerson went out. "Now what's the matter of him, Shorty?"

"He's struck it rich," said the little girl.

"Rich? I want to know what them eyes o' his'n an all the importane means. Ef git down to Dowling in that state, he'll give a dust and your weapon anyhow, and at worst you'll be just as safe to let me figger in the first act. I'll let on you've cleared out—I guess I can do that without no lyin'."

After a while he had gained some calmness and a black stool on the table she took her place in the robe attire, which was floored with boards so loosely set that she would be able to see the proceedings before Shorty then went to a bit of looking glass, and standing before it muffed his head in a scarf that she had given him. Finally he lay down on some hay in a box about four feet long, covered himself with blankets and waited till the crimson sunset faded into twilight. Then he put a light in the window and went comfortably to bed again.

"You're foolish me," said the girl in a loud whisper.

"I'm a little longer on the road than I expected," said Shorty, "but they'll get here all the same. Best not move anymore."

"All right—But say—going to Dowling, Tuckerson?"

"That's what I be—go'in' to Dowling hev a little Chris'mus time all ter myself. Chris'mus hasn't come yet—Shorty—no fear—but most ye are comin' up toasty in are come' t'ay too."

"It's true, then," thought Shorty. "He has struck 'pay dirt,' and no mistake." Then he said, "Are you leaving your little girl all by herself?"

"I hear something now," cried the girl.

"Yes—that's them," said Shorty. "Now, mind, not a move, not a laugh, not a whisper. You ain't scared, are you?"

"I guess I would be if you wasn't here," she said.

The two thieves had hidden in the cottonwoods till nightfall. Now they were yelling for help. Having called in vain for ten minutes, one of them went to the cabin.

"My, my, mate! out here wid his leg broke. Will ye come out an help him?"

No answer. He knocked.

"In, in," said a childlike voice. Coming in, the ruffian saw a little much miffed figure in a little bed in a corner.

"Hello, bubbly," said he. "Where's your father?"

"He ain't home," said the supposed infant, "an' Sally she's gone, and I so fraid, coot oo!"

"Well, no use you cryin'. Shu' your mouth right off," said the thief going to the door. "Hi! Come in here, Jimmy!" he called. "There ain't no one here but a 4-year-old brat, an' I'm goin' to take him."

Jim came in and gloated over the food on the table.

"Guess we cu' work better with grub in us," he said. "We deserve it after our long rule, See?"

They sat down and fell to, disregarding the "4-year-old" till their hunger was nearly satisfied.

"What's this?" said one of the dogs pestered by gold?

"Some in his tiefs ansome in a tin pal," whimpered "bubbly."

"Now, we don't take no foolin'," said one. "We've git through here, you're goin' to show us where that gold is key." See if you don't agree, you'll be takin' care of you alive."

"I'll show you where it is. Oh, I wish my proper was home!"

"Your proper went up. We'll make it all right wid him."

They laughed and went on eating and drinking till Jim chance to look over at the little bed. He gave a start of admiration and threw his coat over his homemade shoulder.

"Look at her in a whisper. I see what you see!"

There standing by the box was—not a child, but a little man with a big revolver, cocked and aimed, in each hand. His head was craned forward, his face was twisted into an expression of intense malignity, his eyes blazed, his stubby red beard literally bristled and his voice rolled out deep and strong:

"When you play tricks on a drunken man and learn his secret, when you go to rob a defenseless girl in a lonely place; when you threaten a little child in his bed, it's well to think."

The solemnity with which these words were spoken, the evident knowledge of their doings and plans, the tiny stature and distorted face of the speaker, thrilled the desperadoes out deep and strong:

"For ye which make bees drunk."

Professor Lawson Tait says there are certain orchids that secure the fertilization of their stigmas by making bees drunk. In no other way could they get these insects to cut up the necessary antics to carry the pollen to the proper place. Every flower, however, is a veritable public house, licensed by nature. The beverage supplied is distinctly alcoholic.

We might swipe a lot o' stuff right here."

"No, don't touch nothin' here, callyou; don't git no one after us. We'll make a han' up on Tuckerson's claim that we got half our lives if all that fool told us was true."

As soon as this way, heading round a bluff, took them out of sight. Shorty was out and in a few minutes more was spurring his little broncho to its best speed. By riding fast over a short cut with the hills behind, he meant to reach Tuckerson's spot.

"Who be you?" asked Tuckerson's daughter as Shorty rode up to the door of the cabin about 9 o'clock in the afternoon. "Oh, I know! You're the little feller down to Put's that always used ter say 'I'd order her for me.'"

"Never mind that now. I've hurried here to tell you of some danger you're in."

"Danger?" said the girl. "G'way, child. There ain't no danger round here—except it's dyin' of loneliness."

"You just listen to me," said Shorty, and told her all about the coming trouble.

He disclosed his plan to her, too, succeeded in convincing her that he was man enough to carry it out and finally induced her to promise to let him in the attic with her gun and an eye that showed she would use it if they resisted. And now, in the early morning, Shorty was still on guard, alert and watchful. He had not thought it wise to go to justice to trust the rugers to cords alone.

That afternoon they were taken to Dowling to be delivered to the authorities. But before they went Tuckerson was moved to speak his admiration for the ex-emporer of Lilliput.

"Very," said he, "you're a long way bigger man than I be. I begin to catch the idea that the real height of a man don't depend on his heft."

Babes of a Wounded Bear.

"One of the peculiar characteristics of bears," said D. M. Bronson of Leadville, Colo., "is that when wounded their first impulse is to bite something. I have spent a good deal of time hunting in the mountains and have seen this fact illustrated many times. Once I remember once shooting at an old bear, but when I struck him in the foreleg she seized the other leg between her jaws and bit it fiercely. At another time I fired at a bear whose cub was asleep close by. On hitting the shot the male bear beat not 40 yards away. I at once fired and wounded him in the shoulder. Then he turned to the cub, and when I shot him again he laid his head on the cub and lay still."

"On still another occasion I came across two bears, a male and a female, feeding on the slope of a long hill. I went around the hill to get them, and on looking over the crest saw the male bear not 40 yards away. I at once fired and wounded him in the shoulder. Then he turned to the cub, and when I shot him again he laid his head on the cub and lay still."

"I am a bear," said Shorty, "and I'm goin' to stay here. I'll be a good turn somethin' so that he could understand that I'm a human being and quit pickin' at me."

No answer. He knocked.

"Hello, bubbly," said he. "Where's your father?"

In 1892 the country by a overwhelming vote declared that it was tired of the legislation that for thirty years had laid burdens too heavy to be borne, and lifted all possible weight from the favored few, who are to be found among our manufacturing and bondholding classes. The law making powers have been legislating the money out of the pockets of the producing classes into the vaults of the already over-rich, till the one is empty and the other over-filled. All this and more the people said they wanted changed. But though there were good men, patriotic men, faithful men in both Houses of Congress who would have gladly carried out the behests of the people, the representatives of trusts and combines, that for many years have grown rich off the plundered wealth of the people, were on hand to buy up enough traitors who, together with the Republican minority, were able to defeat, or at any rate to render almost nugatory the best endeavors of the Louisianians, representatives and thus overthrow the will of the people. This is the plain case. It is with shame that we must admit that men who masquerade in the garb of Democrats proved themselves traitors and help bring this about. It only becomes, then, our bounden duty since we have seen through the treachery and venality of some of the trusted representatives of the people, these same people's interests betrayed, to once more gird ourselves for the trouble and to determine that, though the struggle shall consume a decade in giving us our ends, yet we will not yield an inch.

The very fact that the trusts and combines have shown themselves strong enough to defeat the will of the people by purchasing sufficient venal Democrats to join with their friends, the Republicans, is cause for the most serious and steadfast determination to carry the fight to a successful issue. Therefore let every Democrat cast his vote for the man who will do what he can to put a curb upon the bloated practical industries of the East.

An Immigration Convention.

The Louisville Board of Trade has issued a call for an immigration convention, to be held in that city Octo ber 4th. This is a step in the right direction, as the call very truthfully and aptly recites:

"Kentucky has natural advantages over many other States and countries, and is well adapted to receive the climate best adapted to the health and physical comfort of man; she does not suffer from the extremes of heat and cold, like the States to the south and north of us; she is well watered throughout, and her streams extend by falls, springs, creeks and rivers. She has more lands bordering on navigable rivers than any other State in the Union, and a greater variety of crops can be grown at a profit than in any other State. She has vast quantities of fine land for agricultural purposes which may be had cheap, rich but undeveloped mines and extensive forests of valuable timbers."

"Every year thousands of intelligent and industrious men with sufficient capital come to Kentucky, and in many cases with ample means for large investments, leave Europe, others the most crowded localities of our Eastern and the severe climate of our Northern States, and Canada, and seek homes and fields of operation suited to their conditions and desires."

"They are passing Kentucky by not because she is not well adapted to their interests, but simply because she is failing to call attention to herself, and holding out no friend-ship invitation."

"The States to the west, the south and southwest of us are looking to their interests and are getting the valuable population."

"The facts are only too apparent that we have been content to drift along with the tide while our neighbors have put forth their early strength and best efforts to gain advantages which should have claimed their attention long ago. The United States census shows that there are 10,981,475 acres of unimproved farming lands in the State of Kentucky 1,850. In 1890 there were still 9,593,131 acres, a reduction of only 1,388,131 acres in forty years."

Every man in Kentucky should feel that he has a personal interest in this movement. This is a matter that appeals in a practical way to all. The matter is now in the hands of business men who are thoroughly alive to the necessity of the work, and it will be conducted in a business manner."

Mayors of towns and cities, County Judges, Presidents of Commercial Clubs and of Agricultural Associations are invited to name delegates to this meeting. The railroads and steamboat lines are ready to co-operate, and will sell tickets at one fare for the round trip.

Capt. J. S. Heriot, of Paynes Depot, came up Saturday to spend a couple of days with his wife and child who are visiting his father-in-law Mr. Joseph Johnson near Sidewell.

Capt. W. T. Havens, of Frankfort, who has been spending a couple of weeks with friends in Eastern Kentucky is in the city. His trip seems to have benefited the Captain very materially as he is looking very markedly improved. His close and severe application to his work was telling on him.

R. C. Lloyd has moved to his new stand on Mayville street next door to the Exchange Bank. He is fitted up elegantly with new and neat furniture, and with that same old genial smile his face is greeting his customers. His room is large, spacious and well lighted, and deserves its name, "The City Drug Store," in every sense of the word.

The Kentuckian-Chieze has the following contribution from the members of the Park E. M. E. Church, South, in regard to Rev. C. J. Nugent, who has come among our people to bear the Lord's work here:

"Rev. C. J. Nugent leaves for his new field of work to-day, and we feel it is due him and ourselves that an explanation should be published, that his removal from the M. E. Church, South, at this place, is from no other cause than the financial condition of the church. Wishing to repair our property, a single man became a seeming necessity, just at this time.

"During his year among us, Bro. Nugent has won the confidence and esteem of the entire community by his upright Christian devotion to the church and all its interests.

"He also deeply regret giving up Sister Nugent, as she is indeed a noble worker in every department of church work. We regret we cannot keep her four years. Their work has been so very acceptable and influential for good among our young people, it is doubly regretted that we cannot retain them.

"With love in our hearts we heartily congratulate Mt. Sterling in securing the services of this faithful pastor and wife. We feel our loss is their gain, and pray God's richest blessing upon them in their new home.

MEMBERS."

Mrs. Ella, wife of Herbert O. Lyons, aged 27 years, died at her home in this city, on Friday evening at 7 o'clock. A protracted and painful illness had preceded her demise, but in a true Christian spirit she bore it all and looked into the face of man's last great enemy without a falter. Four years ago she came to this city a happy bride from the home of her father, Mr. J. W. Adams, of Winchester. She leaves besides the devoted husband two motherless little children to suffer the want of a mother's care and love. She was a consistent Christian woman, who, in her quiet way, was making her influence for good felt by all with whom she came in contact. A wide circle of friends mourn the seemingly untimely demise of this good woman, who thus in the fullness of her usefulness was called away. Her remains were taken to Winchester Sunday for interment in the cemetery at that place. The funeral took place from her father's home.

Mr. Thos. Johnson, aged 67, died at his home on Hinkton, near Henry's old mill, in this county, on Friday night, after a protracted illness of erysipelas. The deceased was a farmer, a useful citizen and a good man, who was popular among his neighbors. Two sons survive him. He was a cousin of our townsmen, Col. Thos. Johnson. The interment took place Saturday afternoon at the John Wilson burial ground.

All the late novelties in millinery, notions, kid gloves, hose, corsets, ladies and children's underwear open this week at T. P. Martin & Co.

In Memory of James A. Whitliff.

On the 17th day of September, 1894, at his residence in Fayette county, Ky., James Alexis Whitliff departed this life, in the 48th year of his age. He was the eldest son of Almon and Mary Whitliff, and was born and grew up to manhood near Mt. Sterling in Montgomery county. He was married to Miss Emma Frakes, of Fayette county, in the year 1875, and after their marriage they resided in Montgomery county for several years and until after the death of Mrs. Frakes, the surviving parent of Mrs. Whitliff. Having purchased the interest of Mr. Brooks Frakes, the brother of Mrs. Whitliff, in the farm owned by their father, Calvin Frakes, in Fayette county, they removed to that place in the year 1882, where he has resided the remainder of his life.

Bud Whittet, as he was familiarly called, was an energetic and successful business man. He was a farmer and stock breeder by avocation. He had many friends and acquaintances, and was always approached by everyone and had a word of friendly advice and encouragement for those in distress or affliction. His kindness and liberality were such that he was universally beloved by his neighbors and acquaintances. He was never persistent in urging his opinions upon others, but when he was consulted he gave his advice freely, and many have profited by listening to his counsels.

His integrity was of that exalted type which is found only in connection with the highest standard of Christian character. He was a man of God in the very broadest and sublimest sense. Nothing moved him from the strong, true and never-failing faith in the power and love of Him who caused the rain to fall and the sun to shine alike upon the just and the unjust. We will miss him; his familiar and ever welcome voice of encouragement will no longer be heard in our counsels, and his cheery face will come no more to cheer the circles of his friends and neighbors. But we will not forget him; his example of Christian patience and rectitude will live in the memory of all who knew him; his words of comfort and encouragement will dwell in the hearts of the unfortunate as long as life shall last, and his example of sterling integrity will live on and be the lives of many for good who have never even seen him. He leaves surviving him his widow and four children. These and many others will mourn his untimely death.

Step sweetly, dear Brother, till Jesus shall come.

To gather like jewels from morning dust; At the birth of the bright mid-morning sun;

Will eat their again to stand with the just;

Step on, dear Soldier, thy battle is over;

The foes have retreated, thy banners are furled;

Thou hast fought a good battle—thy crown evermore.

Step sweetly like the stars in the bright upper world.

Sleep on, weary Worker, in garden of God, The seed thou hast planted to fruition shall grow.

Step on, dear Soldier, thy battle is over;

And flowers of heaven shall blossom below;

Sleep sweetly, kind husband, and Father, and Son;

In the grave where knowledge and skill can rest.

Step on, dear Soldier, thy battle is over;

To call thee to labor or duty again,

Till God shall awake thee to summer home.

"It is with pleasure that I give you the details of our little May's sickness and her return to health by the use of Hood's Saraparilla. She was taken ill with a fever and a bad cough.

Following this a sore on her right side began to appear on the lower ribs. In a short time another broke on the left side. She would take cold easily and was subject to attacks of high fever and expel bloody looking mucus from her nose. She was taken to her doctor, Dr. Buckley, who gave her a dose of Hood's Saraparilla and she soon recovered.

She has since been taking Hood's Saraparilla and has been in excellent health ever since.

"A BABE IS AT REST."

Touch the harp lightly,
A babe is at rest;
Sleeping so sweetly;
On the bed she breathes.
That even the angels,
While guarding above,
Saw her sleep so fair
With tidings of love.

Touch the harp lightly,
A shadow has flown
Over the bed,
Now dreary and lone,
In doubt and in anguish,
Weeping and crying
That out from the shadow
Methinks I might say.

Touch the harp lightly,
An angel has come,
And bids will wake us
In the morning when home!
How blest is the mother
To whom it is given
To wake the babe,
Will waken in heaven!

Nathan Upton in New York Ledger.

AN HONEST BURGLAR

I am in the burgling business, and I maintain that it can be conducted as honestly as any other. Perhaps I am mistaken, but I certainly have raised it to a much higher level than it was when I first selected that means of a livelihood.

My motto, "Honesty Is The Best Policy—See!" is deeply engraved on all my professional tools, and my title, "The Honest Burglar" will go on my tombstone in due time and when my strictly honorable exploits can be safely mentioned with pride by my relatives and friends.

I always make a point of seeking a felon who is worthy of my steel. Never do I enter a house no matter what inducements its contents may offer, which has not the very latest scientific and mechanical contrivances, locks and bolts I positively refuse to attack, and carelessly open doors and windows I disdain to make use of. I leave those thidiots for dishonest burglars who take not the professional pride that I find a high toned and patriotic and so encouraging to our self-respect.

Now that I have properly introduced my honest self I'll tell a story.

A wealthy chappie who had made his millions in a way I despise had erected a grand mansion with all the finest electrical burglar alarms known to date. Every door and window was protected in such a way that even the slightest touch after the wires were set would jangle numberless bells and turn on the lights galore all over the house in a brilliant illumination. In addition to all that melodious display there were telltale steps on each staircase and tempting piles of silverware connected with wires to the alarm system.

At last the burglar sighted the safe in the dining room.

All these imposing preparations, expensive and troublesome for their owner, gave to me a glorious delight, and I looked forward to attacking them with all a small boy's Fourth of July enthusiasm.

At last the battle might come, and with it Mr. William Mummer, my active partner in the laundries.

Mr. Mummer was highly respected in the profession. Like myself, he never stooped to conquer and was equally noted for his gentlemanly ways and sturdy bearing.

One day in the late life was he ever taken in and done for, and I couldn't blame him a bit either.

You see, he was making a professional call on a rich bachelor, and while putting things away in the handsomest room he was painfully surprised by the sudden arrival of his host with a loaded revolver in clasp to stay awhile, despite Mr. William's anxiety to catch the train for home.

Soon the jolly gentleman lighted cigars and commenced telling funny stories, ending each one with a chorus of hearty laughter.

When we had had our good the proprietor of not inconsiderable wealth he wasn't wanted, kept a becoming silence until a funnier story than usual was told, and then, after an agonizing struggle to choke down his unfortunate mirth, he exploded with a tremendous "Haw, haw, haw," which frightened the gentle master of the house.

It is needless to say that Mr. Mummer had ample time afterward to enjoy the joke while taking a little vacation from business in the state laundry.

But he soon recovered his respect for his host, and by a trick with whom he was in the same laundry boarding house one night.

While the landlady was ringing the big bell and the alarmed boarders were searching for him with guns, Mr. Mummer entered a deserted room and promptly went to bed with his boots on. There, with the blankets tucked under his chin, he lay yelling as loud as the loudest and granely ordering the bold warriors with guns from his room when they rushed in to see if he was being murdered.

Two weeks his bed belonged to a terror stricken maiden lady who had sought refuge elsewhere. Otherwise Mr. Mummer had been so smart, after all. But he got out of his scrape with a smile, and his fame swag, too, and consequently his fame was undiminished by that episode.

Now that I have introduced Mr. William Mummer, Esq., I will go on with my story.

"Twas a dark and midnight in a dreary November. The sky was shodden and a lively wind was banging shutters and moaning through the swaying branches as Bill and I quietly strolled along the dimly dark and deserted country road.

We were valid, containing articles used in a smoke and smoking pipes, with stoppers on to hide their glow; we silently made good time over the wet and soggy ground till old For Electricity, as we dubbed the object of our attack, loomed up before us.

HORSE AND TRACK.

Kentucky Union, by Aberdeen, has cut the record to 2:11.

Axtell, 2:12, has had seven additions to his 2:30 list this year.

The two-year, Mary Best and Nellie A. have each won over $10,000 this year.

Ralph Wilkes, 2:10½, wears no check, indeed he will break one if it is placed on him.

The yearling record was reduced to 2:23, by Abigail, son of Advertiser, 2:15, and Beautiful Belle, last Thursday at San Jose, Cal.

Kreming, 2:07½, now at the Lexington track, showed lameness in his work last Saturday, and probably will not start again this season.

Oima will start in the 2:20 class at Lexington next Monday. Dalle Wilkes will start in 2:14 class Tues. and Folly in 2:17 class Friday.

As was expected, Directum won the stallion race at Mystic Park, Boston, Wednesday, defeating Arion and Nelson. The best time was 2:10 in the second heat.

A. H. Moore, of Philadelphia, who owns more great producing brood mares than any breeder in this country, has bought Atlanta, dam of Aliz, 2:03, and Josephine Young, dam of Joe Patchen.

More good yearlings have shown up in the bluegrass in 1894 than was ever known before, and it is no uncommon thing to see them show extreme speed for short distances. The two year olds for 1895 will be great.

Last spring Monroe Salsbury made the prediction that he would secure a two-minute performer from the foals of Direct. As he has already got a two-year-old from that horse that has a record of 2:07½, who will say that his prediction will not be fulfilled?

The sum of $30,000 will be given in prizes at the National Horse Show in New York. Breeders owners of high-class thoroughbreds, trotters, Hackneys, carriage horses, saddleurs, hunters and ponies, will be interested in examining the prize list, which the secretary will be pleased to forward to all applicants.

Red Wilkes has one hundred performers in the 2:30 list. Electheron was the first horse to have one hundred of his sons and daughters make records of 2:30 or better. Nutwood was the second and Red Wilkes the third. When Electheron put his one-hundredth performer in the list he was twenty-three years old. Nutwood reached the same position at the same age. Red Wilkes is twenty years old and is consequently the youngest horse that ever had one hundred performers in the 2:30 list.

The Lexington trots begin next Saturday, and will be the greatest meeting ever held in this country. The first day the $5,000 two-year-old stake, 2:19 class and 2:30 pace; second, Monday, the $5,000 stake with fifteen entries of the best in the world, 2:24 class and 2:26 class, both with big entries; third day the $30,000 stake, for three year olds, 2:14 class and 2:18 pace, and each day of the meeting has attractions that are not often seen on any track. Write to Ed Tipper for list of entries.

Kreming, 2:07½, will not start again this year. He is now at Lexington, but owing to a slight injury to a ligament in his right hind leg, is a little lame. The veterinarians say that it can go very fast now, but being an extremely valuable horse, Mr. Allen does not care to run any risks with him, and a hard contested race might result in an aggravation of his injury. Kreming is the great horse that his career has proven him to be. He is a wonderfully strong built fellow and is muscled like a prize fighter. Like Panico, he is perfectly kind and manifests no nervousness or irritability when strangers enter his stall.

Merit Wins.

We desire to say to our citizens, that for years we have been selling Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Dr. King's New Lite Pills, Bucklin's Arthritis Salve and Electric Bitters and never handed remedies that sell as well or that give such universal satisfaction. We do not hesitate to guarantee them every time, and we stand ready to refund the purchase price, if satisfactory results do not follow their use. These remedies have won their great popularity by their merit.

HORSE AND TRACK.

Kentucky Union, by Aberdeen, has cut the record to 2:11.

Axtell, 2:12, has had seven additions to his 2:30 list this year.

The two four-year, Mary Best and Nellie A. have each won over $10,000 this year.

Ralph Wilkes, 2:10, wears no check, indeed he will break one if it is placed on him.

The yearling record was reduced to 2:23, by Abdell, son of Advertiser, 2:15, and Beautiful Bell, last Thursday at San Jose, Cal.

Kremlin, 2:07, now at the Lexington track, showed lameness in his work last Saturday, and probably will not start again this season.

Olima will start in the 2:26 class at Lexington next Monday. Dallie Wilkes will start in 2:14 class Tuesday, and Folly in 2:17 class Friday.

As was expected, Directum won the stallion race at Mystic Park, Boston, Wednesday, defeating Arion and Nelson. The best time was 2:10 in the second heat.

There will be made several new freight cars for the K.Y. & S.A.

Mr. J. M. Bigstaff and Marion O'cockrell are in Tennessee buying feeding cattle.

T. J. Bigstaff has moved into the new building of Mrs. Lucile Wilson, on Sycamore street.

The International Fox Chase of the United States will be held at Olympia November 19. Extensive preparations will be made.

The friends of Mrs. Delta Hazeleigh received a telegram on Sunday morning from Morehead, where she is staying with her grand-daughter, Mrs. Z. T. Young, Jr., that she was in a dying condition. Mrs. J. D. Hazeleigh and Mrs. W. H. Stroosman left on the first train for her bedside, "Aunt Delta," as she is to every one, is one of the best women that ever lived. News from her bedside yesterday said that it was only a matter of a few hours till she would enter upon her reward.

The two good deacons, Jephtha Butler and Horace James, who so far forgo themselves as to get into a fist fight on the steps of their church in Paris, just because they disagreed about the advisability of the election of Col. Breckinridge to Congress, have shaken hands, made acknowledgments to their church, and are thoroughly ashamed of themselves. So says the Paris Kentuckian-Citizen. Any man may fall into error. A good man will promptly acknowledge that error and do what he can to repair the wrong done. It is to be hoped the unfortunate episode will only tend to make each of the actors more watchful, and result in making them more useful men in God's service.

CINCINNATI LIVE STOCK MARKET.

Cincinnati, September 29, 1894.

Hogs—The total receipts of hogs during the past week show 1,725 more than arrived last week, and 2,215 more than during the corresponding week last year. Select butchers $5.50; none of the best on sale; packing $5.00; 550; most sales at $5.25; 5.40; common and rough $4.50; light shippers $5.50; 25; common to good pigs $4.00; 4.00; cattle and scalawags $3.50; 3.75.

Sheep and Lambs—The receipts for the week show over 4,000 increase compared with the week before. Good to choice weathers $3.25 to $3.75; good to choice ewes and wethers mixed $2.75 to $3.25; common to fair $1 to $2.50; stock ewes $1.75 to $2.25; lamb extra $4.10 to $4.50; good to choice $3.25 to 4; common to fair $2 to 3.

HORSES AND MULE MARKET.

The market has been very good, considering the light supply of stock, which at times did not equal the demand. Receipts were somewhat better, but owing to the activity all consignments were readily disposed of. Drivers, cheap sheep and extra match teams still have the call.

Horses—Coach horses, good $110 to 140, extra $140 to 190; driving horses, good $90 to 110, extra $110 to 160; draft horses, good $90 to 115, extra $115 to 165; saddle horses, good $85 to 115, extra $115 to 140; Southern, good $30 to 50, extra $30 to 75.

Mules—14 to 14 hands, good $50 to 55, extra $50 to 60, 14 to 15 hands, good $60 to 70, extra $70 to 80; 15 to 15½ hands, good $75 to 90, extra $85 to 100; 16 to 16 hands, good $100 to 115, extra $110 to 125; 16 to 16½ hands, good $120 to 135, extra $130 to 145.

LOUISVILLE TOBACCO MARKET.

Sales on our market for the week just closed, amount to 3,360 hds., with receipts for the same period, 1,719 hds. Sales on our market since January 1st, amount to 131,115 hds. Sales of the crop of 1893 on our market to this date amount 130,374 hds.

Prices for burley tobacco this week have been about the same as the week previous. We have reports of some damage by frost to the growing crop in the low lands in Southern Indiana and Daviess County, Ky. Other sections report no serious damage.

The following quotations fairly represent our market for burley tobacco, (1893 crop.)

Trash, (Dark or damaged tobacco) $2.50 to $3.50.

Common color trash, $4.00 to $5.00

Medium to good color trash, $4.00 to $6.00.

SALE OF

Cattle and Land.

ON WEDNESDAY, OCTOBER 17TH,

I will at my residence on the Mt. Sterling and Owingsville Turnpike Road, about seven miles east of Mt. Sterling, sell in public auction my entire herd of Short Horn cattle, numbering about one hundred head, and consisting of such families as Barrington, Kirklevington, Young Marys and Rose of Sharon. There are several young bulls and about 25 steers, mostly two years old, in the herd. Calves will be furnished to any purchaser desiring. Sale will begin at 10 o'clock a. m., and will be made on a credit till March 1, 1895, purchaser to give obligation with security, bearing interest at six per cent from date.

Also, at same time and place, I will sell 90 acres of land, known as the Peggy Young farm, situated on Flat Creek on the Mt. Sterling and Owingsville Turnpike Road, about one mile east of my residence. This is a good dwelling, large, excellent to barns, and a good tenant house on the land, and it is well watered. Terms on the land as follows: One third cash, one-third in twelve months and balance in twenty-four months, the deferred payments to bear six per cent interest.

Will also sell four work mules and two horses.

GEORGE HAMILTON.

PUBLIC SALE

OF

Horse Stock, Cattle, &c.,

THURSDAY, OCTOBER 4, '94.

Having determined to make a change in my business, I have concluded to sell all my horses at public auction. The horses will consist of a stock of about 50 head and trotters, harness and saddle horses. Blood money such as Bourbon Wilkes, Princeps, Mambrino Star, Clermont and Sherman's Hambletonian. Some nice colts and fillies, also Algeria and other 4-year-old geldings, geldings; some good prospect trotters and race horses as any in the land. The saddle horses are headed by that prince of saddle stallions, King William 2, a sire of saddle horses that always sell well.

For those who will also close on my entire stock of horses at the same time and place, which includes some extra nice and well bred stock.

I will also sell 20 head of yearling cattle, extra good; 1 three-year-old gelding, some sheep and goats, 100 head of calves, 100 head of cows; the big Jack, Geld, Jeff, one of the best breeders in the country; also 1 young jack two years old; from 25 to 50 acres of corn in the field.

I will also sell from 150 to 200 acres of the best land in the State, with improvements.

The farm is situated on the Colby Pike, 3 miles from Winchester, in one of the best of neighborhoods. The farm will show for itself, and if you want to buy, but the time come and see, I will take pleasure in showing it.

The sale will take place on the premises 3 miles from Winchester, on the Colby Pike, commencing at 10 o'clock, a. m. Terms on day of sale.

Catalogue or stock will be sent on application. Address
